We are living at a critical moment in history when small actions can play a huge role in moving the human community towards emancipation and away from destructive competition and environmental degradation. Scholars and teachers can bring important resources to struggles for social change, and we must support initiatives to defend the knowledge commons and fight neoliberalism in our workplaces. Learn how INoSA connects with the U.S. and World Social Forum process to support local and global movement building.

The International network of Scholar Activists is a network of teachers & scholars from many disciplines committed to advancing social movements and radical democracy—both within and outside academia. It supports scholarship and educational work related to these efforts, especially within the World Social Forum process.

INOSA's Aims:

- Keep members informed about and linked to World Social Forums
- Network professional associations advancing scholar-activism
- Defend the knowledge commons
- Cross-disciplinary and cross-national communication and collaboration
- Share stories, ideas, and proposals emerging from social movements
- Mentor young scholar-activists
- Support access to education & resistance to neoliberalism on campuses
- Support research and writing on the WSF process and movements
